Sources and Evidence

- "The Only Jew" is the detailed record of David Epstein of what happened in the little town of Libishey, in the district of Kamin-Kushirsk, province of Pinsk, in the days of the holocaust. It is written in popular Yiddish, by D.E. who, together with his wife, joined the partisans when the ghetto was liquidated. He was wounded in battle near Kovel. When recording the facts in writing, in the end of the war, D.E. was under the impression that he was the only surviver of "his Jewish people".
- "The Story of the s/s 'Pancho' 1940—1942" is the story about one of the Jewish refugees ships that tried to reach the shores of Eretz Israel during the years of the holocaust. The article is part of a study done by Bruce Lawrence on "The story of the Jews detained in the camp Paramonte di Tercia in Italy in 1940—1945" under the auspieces of the Institute for contemporary Jewry at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

Research

- "From Midnight Until 5 O'clock in the Morning I didn't Sleep", by Roman Zimandt, is an important and interesting attempt to analyze and to explain the diary of Adam Czerniakov, the head of the Judenrat of Warsaw, who, as we know, ended his life, because of the deportations from the ghetto in the Summer of 1942. R.Z. is a student of Polish literature, who lives in Poland. His work is an attempt to understand the workings of Czerniakov's mind through critical analysis of the original text. The final part of the essay will be printed in the next issue.
- "The Ghetto as a Form of Government" by Prof. Raul Hilberg (Dep. of Political Sciences, University of Vermont, U.S.A) and "Reactions of the Jewish Leadership to Nazi Policies" by Prof. Yehuda Bauer (Inst. of Contemporary Jewry, Hebrew University, Jerusalem) are two lectures given in March 1975 in New York at a conference on "The Holocaust 30 Years Later", organized by the Institue of Contemporary Jewry, Jerusalem, with the assistance of the United Jewish Appeal.

- "Penetration of Nazi Antisemitic Ideology and its impact on Polish Antisemitism" by Josef Te'eni, explains how the Catholic religious antisemitism in Poland gained momentum under the influence of Nazi racialist theories.
- "6 Days in the Month of July 1944 in Hungary" by Zvi Erez tells of what happened in Budapest when the armed forces of the Axis satellites intervened in order to prevent by force, if necessary — the deportation of Jews. This late attempt was made by the Regent of Hungary, Admiral Horthy.

Contemporary Neo-Nazi Literature

"Review of Neo-Nazi Literature", by Herman Langbein, deals with publications influenced by Nazi heirs and heritage and aimed at falsifying, belittling and explaining away what the Nazis did to our people during the second world war. All this upon the strength of so-called new research or on arbitrary changes of long known facts.

Personalities

 Portrait of a Fighter" by Dr. Dov Levin tries to bring alive the character of Chaim Yellin, one of the leaders of the Jewish underground in the ghetto of Kovno who fell while trying to get Jewish fighters to act in the forests.

Books

"Lebensborn" ("The Source of Life") by Yehuda Tubin reviews a book by Marc Hillel (in French) "In the Name of Race", that deals with one of the projects of the Nazi regime, whose real nature the lawyers for the defence managed to hide and obliterate even at the Nuremberg trials.
